The Magi and Pilgrimage

The Christian tradition of pilgrimage is strong. The Magi are among the first to go to Jerusalem and Bethlehem, to seek the Christ Child. Since then, over the centuries, Christians have travelled long distances to visit Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Rome, Compostella, Walsingham, Canterbury, Mari-azell, Altötting, Kevelaer, Skellig Michael, Loreto, Chartres, Mont Saint Michel, Montserrat, Lourdes, Fatima, and the many, many other places associated with Christ, his Mother and his saints. Pilgrimage is in our blood; it symbolises and celebrates our status as those who journey through this life to our place with God for all eternity.

A Christian is a pilgrim (see Hebrews 11:13). In Part II of his Pilgrim's Progress (1684), John Bunyan inserted his famous hymn, which begins:

Who would true valour see,
 Let him come hither;
 One here will constant be,
 Come wind, come weather.
 There's no discouragement
 Shall make him once relent
 His first avowed intent,
 To be a pilgrim.

Many Christians (especially if they start out from Australia) have, like the Magi, to travel a long way when they go on pilgrimage, but there are shorter and more frequent ways, and I would like to suggest one such way to you now.

Our church is designed for the pilgrim. The same material is under our feet from the moment we enter the pedestrian gate and (whenever we join it from the parking lot) continues through the main doors and narthex to the doors into the nave. It is under the fixed pews, the altar, the ambo and the presider's chair. It is a path we trace whenever we come to participate in Mass and other sacraments and rites, and whenever we leave to take up again our daily duties. Our coming to church is as it were a stop on the pilgrimage of faith, when we are nourished and motivated to persevere on our journey. Our coming together, our hearing and responding to God's word, our nourishment by Christ's Body and Blood - all these give us the ability and courage to persevere in what we began at Baptism.

In a very poignant way, that is driven home at funerals. These are the only occasions when the doors are opened to the left of the presider. The faithful departed, who has many times entered and left the church by the route I have just described, now, having come to the end of his journey, is taken through these doors directly to the hearse waiting outside.

So when you next come to church, think of yourself as a pilgrim. It is nice to go Jerusalem, but you really have Jerusalem here at Woy Woy.

Social Justice

Hungry for Change:

Nearly half of the deaths of children under five, worldwide are due to hunger. So how do we stop this shameful global issue?

Can we defeat world hunger?

Two factors stand in the way of attaining the Sustainable Development Goal of ending world hunger by 2030. Unicef reports that only five of the 22 leading countries have fully met their pledge of funds. Also, conflicts and famine in Yemen, Somalia, South Sudan and Nigeria make hitting that date difficult.

What can we do? If hunger was an illness - a disease that killed more children than AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis combined, as it does - perhaps we would treat it with more urgency. But hunger isn't an incurable disease. We know the cure. Huge strides have already been made in reducing levels of malnutrition, proving that eradicating hunger is achievable. For us, the cure starts with our will, our commitment and our wallets.

Help End Hunger: We often feel powerless in the face of a huge challenge, like ending hunger, but every little thing you do can help.

1) Waste less and donate the money you save, no matter how little that is.

2) Donate to an organisation that offers a sustainable, long-term solution, e.g. Caritas Australia, the international aid and development agency of the Catholic Church, works in Partnership with local communities in over 30 countries globally to end poverty, promote justice and uphold dignity. www.caritas.org.au/ or calling 1800 024 413.

3) Make a noise. Email your local representative and tell them that Australia has to do more in living up to its responsibilities to those need help.

Epiphany of the Lord, Sunday, January 8

Is 60:1–6
Ps 72:1–2, 7–8, 10–11, 12–13
Eph 3:2–3, 5–6
Mt 2:1–12

Today's reading from Isaiah is an obvious fit with the Gospel reading. The magi in Matthew (v 2) represent the nations of the world coming to greet the "newborn king of the Jews." It is easy to understand how early Christians could see that visitation as a fulfilment of the text in Isaiah; our prophet envisioned a time when Sion would rejoice, for "the glory of the Lord shines upon you" (v 1). The gifts of "gold and frankincense" carried from Sheba (v 6) are two of the three offerings presented by the magi in the Gospel. For Matthew and his church, God's promises, fulfilled for Jerusalem centuries earlier, are being fulfilled once again in Jesus.

In Ephesians we hear of the mystery, "made known to me by revelation" (v 3), concerning God's gift of salvation offered to the gentiles. Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, encourages his audience to persevere in their faith. God has called them to also share in the promises made to Abraham. They are "coheirs ... / and co-partners in the promise in Christ Jesus" (v 6).

There is a marked contrast between King Herod and the magi in today's Gospel. In order to assist the magi, Herod, king of the Jews, consults "all the chief priests and the scribes" to discover the place "where the Christ was to be born" (v 4). The Hebrew Scriptures point to "Bethlehem of Judea" (v 5). Following this information and the star, the magi arrive at "the place where the child was" (v 9). They respond with joy when they discover the child, and they present him with gifts fit for a king. Herod, on the other hand, who needs no star to lead him to the Messiah, is "greatly troubled" (v 3) by the news of Jesus' birth and seeks to have him eliminated. His response to the birth of Jesus reminds us that even the Prince of Peace is sometimes greeted with violence.

For reflection: Do I strive to walk in God's light? Do I, like the magi, sometimes see God's presence in the world around me?

Baptism of the Lord, Monday, January 9

Is 42:1–4, 6–7
Ps 28:1–4, 9–10
Acts 10:34–38
Mt 3:13–17

The text from Isaiah speaks of God's "servant" and "chosen one with whom I am pleased" (v 1). This servant will faithfully "bring forth justice" (v 3), a term used three times in today's passage. Writing near the end of the Babylonian exile, our prophet envisions a time of renewal for the people. The Catechism of the Catholic Church defines justice as "the constant and firm will to give their due to God and neighbour" (1807); one who acts justly works to bring about God's will. The exiles hoped for one who would come and restore their nation. This hope is eventually incorporated into their expectation for a Messiah, an anointed servant of God who would establish God's rule on earth. For us as Christians, this hope is realised in Jesus, God's chosen one.

For the evangelist Matthew, Jesus is the fulfilment of God's promises made to Israel. This is made clear in his infancy narratives, where he references Old Testament prophecies fulfilled by Jesus five times in two chapters. In today's scene the words spoken by the heavenly voice (v 17) are related to the text from Isaiah 42:1. As God's servant, Jesus comes "to fulfil all righteousness" (v 15). His baptism serves as the first event of his public ministry, and the heavenly voice confirms his identity as God's "beloved Son" (v 17).

The scene in Acts takes place in the house of Cornelius, a Roman centurion. He is the first gentile to be baptised, along with his household. This is a significant turning point for the church in that it illustrates that the gospel is intended for people "in every nation" (v 35), not just the Jews. Peter speaks of Jesus' baptism as an anointing "with the Holy Spirit and power"; as God's anointed one, Jesus "went about doing good / and healing all those oppressed by the devil" (v 38). This is a sign of God's realm unfolding in our world. United with Christ in baptism, we too are called to do God's work.

For reflection: How am I living my baptismal call to do God's will? What can I do to promote justice in my local community?

Today we remember the three wise men from the East who came to pay homage to the infant Jesus, bringing Him rich gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. The gifts we bring — our time, service, and some share of what we earn for the work we do — are equally precious in His sight.

Tithing

Paul Turner

Tithing is a sign of your gratitude for what God has done for you. The practice guides the way that many believers contribute to their own places of worship. The word “tithe” means “tenth,” and it comes from an Old Testament practice of returning to God one-tenth of what a person receives. For example, Leviticus 27:30 and 32 say that a tenth of all crops and farm animals belongs to the Lord. And not just any tenth — the first tenth, the first fruits. These go back to God.

After all, God made everything. God owns everything. The things we “own” are not really ours. They are God’s. God has placed them in our hands, making us stewards of them. We take care of them while we are alive, and we put them to the use that we believe God has in mind.

Some houses of worship recommend a full 10 percent for their support. Others suggest 5 percent, so that you can share another 5 percent with other charities.

Many people struggle to meet these goals. They have trouble paying their own bills. Others can contribute more than 10 percent, and perhaps they owe it to the community to give back a little more.

Planning your gift is usually a good idea. Those who set a personal goal have a sharper aim. If your parish asks you to make a pledge, this is a good way to set that goal. It will also help the parish to make its plans and to be better stewards of the gifts you make.

Giving a small gift is better than giving no gift. Those who tithe generally report a sense of spiritual satisfaction. They give out of love, and they feel that they are being good stewards of the gifts that God has entrusted to them.
