My Last Easter Here

Today is the last Sunday at Woy Woy for Fr Stephen and me. We shall, of course, be looking after the place until the new team arrives. Fr Stephen will say his last Mass here on Friday morning, and I, on Saturday morning. As I informed you earlier, he will then become Administrator at Toukley and I shall retire.

Fr Stephen had a little note for everyone in last Sunday's The Voice, so let me here speak for myself.

These thirteen years have been interesting, to put it mildly. There have been ups and downs, highs and lows, but overall the highs have outnumbered the lows.

As I said when I first came here, I knew that I had been sent to build a church (and the eventual project had to encompass a lot more than that), but I saw as my main job something a lot more important than that—and that was to do my best to build up the Church here.

That meant, as far as I was concerned, that my first duty was to preach the gospel. My principal means of doing that were Sunday and weekday homilies, columns in The Voice, and catechising the children in St John the Baptist School at whole school Masses, class Masses and at weekly Second Rite celebrations of the Sacrament of Penance. Next in importance was good liturgy—not entertainment but participation, singing wherever appropriate, joyful and committed.

And yet building the church, presbytery and parish centre (the Ethel Cox Centre) and adapting the old church for use as a parish hall (the Walter Baker Hall) were also important, since, each in its own way, these buildings can be used, now and in the future, for building up the Body of Christ in this place.

The wonderful spin-off for me has been the number of friends that I have made over the thirteen years. The typical Woy Woy parishioner is a very generous person—generous with time, talent and treasure. It is one of the privileges of the diocesan priesthood that the priest who stays long enough not only can be knocked about but also (and more importantly) is edified and strengthened by the commitment and faith of the parishioners. That has been my experience here.

And so, good bye. We'll probably run into each other from time to time. I wish my successor and his assistants well, and I wish you all the best for the future.

FR JOHN HILL, P.P.

The Just Word

Time for a change on

Refugees:

A disturbing Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) report into children in detention has prompted Catholic advocacy groups to again call for the Government to change its approach to asylum seekers.

The report reveals 34 per cent of children detained in Australian centres displayed signs of serious mental illness requiring referral to a mental health professional.

The findings of this report document the harm caused to children who have come to this country seeking safety. 'This is an opportunity for the government to take stock, reflect on the effects of current policy and make a positive change', said Oliver White, from Jesuit Refugee Service Australia.

Mass During the Day, Sunday, April 5 2nd Sunday of Easter, April 12

Acts 10:34a, 37-43

Ps 118:1-2, 16-17, 22-23

Col 3:1-4 or 1 Cor 5:6b-8

Sequence, "Victimae paschali laudes"

Jn 20:1-9 or Mk 16:1-7 or (at an afternoon or evening

Mass) Lk 24:13-35

Peter's words to the pilgrims in Jerusalem on Pentecost summarize the core message of the gospel: "God shows no partiality" (see v 34b). Jesus was anointed "with the Holy Spirit and power" and "God was with him" (v 38). For the early church, Jesus is the fulfillment of God's promise spoken by "all the prophets" (v 43). As a disciple, Peter is aware of his own responsibility "to preach to the people and testify" (v 42). As spiritual descendants of the apostles, we share in that responsibility to bring the gospel to the world.

In Colossians we are reminded that we "were raised with Christ"; because we are united with Christ in his resurrection, we should "think of what is above, not of what is on earth" (v 2). In light of our heavenly citizenship, Paul encourages us to "put to death" those things "that are earthly" (see v 5).

After discovering Jesus's tomb empty, Mary Magdalene runs to tell Simon Peter and "the other disciple whom Jesus loved" that "they have taken the Lord from the tomb" (v 2). She suspects grave robbers. For our evangelist, she is still in the "dark" (v 1) both literally and metaphorically; she does not yet understand the meaning of the empty tomb. There are no angels here (as in the other Gospel accounts) to announce the good news of the resurrection. Belief in the resurrection is something that comes with faith for some (the beloved disciple) and with an encounter with the risen one for others (Mary and Peter). But no matter how faith is acquired, it changes our life. As we celebrate the resurrection today, may we share in the blessings of the risen Christ.

For Reflection: How can I more fully embrace the risen Christ in my life? How does my experience of the death of loved ones contribute to my understanding of, and hope in, the resurrection?

Acts 4:32-35

Ps 118:2-4, 13-15, 22-24

1 Jn 5:1-6

Jn 20:19-31

Our first reading today paints an idealized picture of life in the early Jerusalem church. In the Acts of the Apostles, Luke shows us what life can be like among a community of believers open to the Holy Spirit. The example of the early church serves as a lesson for us. Luke stresses two things in his description of the community: they "bore witness to the resurrection" (v 33), and they looked out for each other – "there was no needy person among them" (v 34). Our text calls us to be "of one heart and mind" (v 32) as we strive to live out our faith.

The reading from First John reinforces this message as it calls us to live our love for God by keeping "his commandments," which "are not burdensome" (v 3). Our author reminds us that our faith in Jesus Christ is evidence that we are "begotten by God" (v 1). And with God's help we are able to conquer the world (v 4) and live as light in the midst of darkness. The battle between good and evil is not finished, but the outcome has been guaranteed.

John's Gospel is originally thought to have ended with chapter 20. Its last two verses read like a conclusion. Our author tells us that "Jesus did many other signs in the presence of his disciples that are not written in this book" (v 30). Looking at the other canonical Gospels, we find many other signs or miracles. In fact, in John 21 we have another collection of stories about Jesus, probably added to the text by a later editor. Our original evangelist tells us that the purpose of his text is to provide material to either inspire or reinforce faith so "that through this belief you may have life in his name" (v 31). This dynamic of revelation leading to faith leading to salvation is found throughout John's text.

For Reflection: How do I bear witness to the resurrection? What gospel stories in particular inspire my faith?

Alleluia! Christ is risen and is victorious over sin and death!
We are good stewards of our faith if, like St. Paul, we share this good news whenever and wherever we can.

Miraculous Medal

Paul Turner

The miraculous medal is a devotional article adopted by many Catholics around the world. The medal is worn on a ribbon around the neck to assist in the practice of prayer.

Saint Catherine Labouré had just begun her life in the Parisian religious community of the Daughters of Charity in 1830 when she saw a vision of the Blessed Virgin Mary proclaiming her care for the world and her desire to help those in need.

The design of the medal comes directly from Catherine's vision. On the front is an image of Mary, standing atop a partially visible globe and crushing the head of a serpent. (Genesis 3:15 says that a woman – or her offspring – would crush the head of the tempter.) Rays of light stream from Mary's fingers, symbols of the grace she channels for believers. Along the oval border stand the words, "O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee." Thus the image affirms the belief that Mary was preserved from sin throughout her entire life, from the moment she was conceived in her mother's womb. The church celebrates the Immaculate Conception each December 8.

On the reverse is the letter M, over which stands a cross resting on a bar that weaves through the letter. Twelve stars surround this image, recalling the prophetic vision of Revelation 12:1. Near the bottom are two suffering hearts, one wrapped with thorns, signifying the heart of Christ, and the other penetrated by a sword, recalling a prophecy from Luke 2:35, representing Mary.

Many people testify that some who put on the medal experience miraculous cures. Anyone who wears it may become more attentive to the favours God grants at the intercession of the Blessed Mother.
