A Parish Centenary

One reason for holding our mission event next week is that this year we celebrate an important centenary.

The original church—now the Walter Baker Hall—was blessed and opened on 23rd August 1914. The stone that records this event may be seen through the fence on Blackwall Road, near the corner with Victoria Road.

There is no mention of the reigning Pontiff, because there wasn't one: Pope (later Saint) Pius X had died three days before, on 20th August; the conclave did not assemble until 31st August; Benedict XV was elected on 3rd September.

There was no cardinal in Australia at the time (Cardinal Moran had died in 1911), so no one from here experienced the difficulty of trying to get to Rome (in 1914!) before the doors closed on the conclave. Even Cardinal Gibbons, who had only to get to Rome from Baltimore (U.S.A.), arrived too late. The rules for the conclave were simply impossible for any cardinal who lived outside Europe.

Australia was at war. Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife had been assassinated at Sarajevo on 28th June and the United Kingdom (and therefore Australia) had declared war on Germany on 4th August and on Austria-Hungary on 12th.

The crowd that assembled in Woy Woy to welcome Archbishop Michael Kelly could not have failed to be affected by the sombre atmosphere that enveloped both Church and State at that time.

Pius X had done his best to avert war and his successor, Benedict XV, worked hard to bring the Great War to an end. He got no credit or thanks for this, however: the Germans felt that he favoured the French, and the French, that he favoured the Germans (or at least the Austrians). There is a CTS pamphlet on sale in our CTS display rack, explaining his role in the War.

So the church was blessed and opened at a critical time in church and world history. A war was starting that would end with most of the belligerents disappeared or weakened: there would be no German Empire, no Austro-Hungarian Empire; the British Empire would never be the same again; the United States would emerge as a major power; new nations would come about. Under Benedict XV and Pius XI, the Church would begin to move from the fortress mentality that prevailed until Pius X, to a fresh engagement with a changing world.

A hundred years later, everything is once again changing. May our mission event help us to face the future!

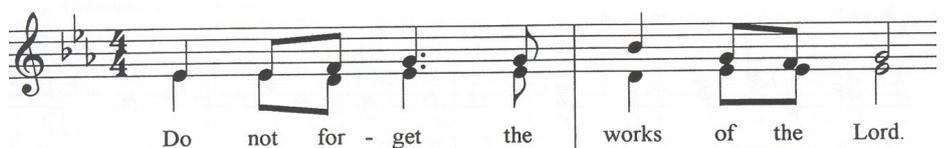

FR JOHN HILL, P.P.

Thomas Merton's Prayer for Peace:

O Loving God, help us to be masters of the weapons that threaten to master us. Help us to use science for peace and plenty, not for war and destruction. Show us how to use atomic power to bless our children's children, not to blight them. Save us from the compulsion to follow our adversaries in all that we most hate, confirming them in their hatred and suspicion of us. Resolve our inner contradictions, which now grow beyond belief and beyond bearing. They are at once a torment and a blessing; for if you had not left us the light of conscience, we would not have to endure them. Teach us to be long-suffering in anguish and insecurity, teach us to wait and trust. Grant light, grant strength and patience to all who work for peace...grant us prudence in proportion to our power, wisdom in proportion to our science, humaneness in proportion to our wealth and might. And bless our earnest will to help all races and peoples to travel, in friendship with us, along the road to justice, liberty and lasting peace.

Exaltation of the Holy Cross, Sunday, September 14

Nm 21:4-9
Ps 78:1-2, 34-35, 36-37, 38
Phil 2:6-11
Jn 3:13-17

The feast of Exaltation of the Holy Cross has its origins in the fourth century, when St. Helena, mother of Constantine, discovered what she believed to be the Cross of Christ. Constantine memorialised this discovery by having the churches of Calvary and the Holy Sepulchre constructed in Jerusalem. After the dedication of the churches, the feast was celebrated annually to commemorate the cross's discovery. We honour the cross because it is a sign of both the death of Jesus and his victory over death.

The episode in Numbers anticipates Jesus's crucifixion. The bronze seraph serpent that Moses makes is a sign of the death brought by the serpents, but it is also the sign that brings recovery from the snakebites. Moses mounts the bronze serpent on a pole and lifts it up in the sight of the people so that when "any who have been bitten look at it, they will live" (v 8).

Paul speaks of how Jesus "emptied himself, / taking the form of a slave, / coming in human likeness" (v 7). In response to Jesus's self-abasement, "God greatly exalted him" (v 9). For Paul, this example of humility is one we ought to follow as disciples of Christ. Unlike Adam and Eve, who sought to exalt themselves by eating the forbidden fruit, Christ shows us an example of true humility in embracing humanity and accepting death, "even death on a cross" (v 8).

In the Gospel, Jesus speaks of himself as "the one who has come down from heaven" (v 13). As God's Son, he came into the world so "that the world might be saved through him" (v 17). His being "lifted up" (v 14) refers to the crucifixion; for John, this represents not defeat but triumph, the hour of Jesus's glory.

For reflection: Do I think of the cross as a sign of defeat or of victory? Is the cross or crucifix displayed in a prominent place in my home?

25th Sunday in Ordinary Time, September 21

Is 55:6-9
Ps 145:2-3, 8-9, 17-18
Phil 1:20-24, 27
Mt 20:1-16

Isaiah reminds us that God "is generous in forgiving" (v 7). The Lord tells us, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, / nor are your ways my ways" (v 8). We should not expect God to act as we would; rather we should strive to conform our actions to the mind of God. God calls sinners to return, not so that they might be condemned but that they might be forgiven.

The church in Philippi was the first Christian community in Europe, a major step in the growth of Christianity. Writing from prison (see v 7), Paul calls the Philippians to persevere in their faith, conducting themselves "in a way worthy of the gospel of Christ" (v 27). Not knowing whether he will face death or release from prison, he longs "to depart this life and be with Christ" (v 23). But to "remain in the flesh / is more necessary for your benefit" (v 24).

The parable of the workers in the vineyard makes many people uncomfortable. Why should someone who worked only an hour get the same pay as someone who "bore the day's burden and the heat" (v 12)? It doesn't seem fair. Jesus tells this parable to teach us that God is more concerned with being merciful than with being fair. We should not be envious because God is generous (v 15).

For reflection: Am I an all-day labourer, or have I come to work late in the day? What is my response to God's mercy extended to others? Do I see God as not fair or as generous?

Even though the Lord led them out of Egypt and provided for their every need, the people in today's first reading were complaining and ungrateful. Does my stewardship of God's gifts show that I know from Whom they came and am grateful?

Weddings at Sunday Mass

Paul Turner

A Catholic wedding may take place during a regularly scheduled parish Sunday Mass. Many people think about a wedding as a separate event to which specific people are invited, but it is permissible to celebrate the rite of marriage within a Mass at which members of the parish community are already gathered on their own.

Various circumstances may suggest this idea. Perhaps the bride and groom are well known to the people who attend a specific Mass at the parish, and they would all like to share this joyful day together. Perhaps the couple has very few friends in the area but would like a larger community to witness their marriage. Perhaps the church already has a crowded schedule of services on the weekend when the couple would like to be wed, and they could take advantage of a Mass already on the calendar. Perhaps the priest travels to various church buildings on Sundays and will be only briefly in the locale where the bride and groom would like the service.

If either the bride or the groom is not a Catholic, their wedding usually takes place outside of Mass. But when both are Catholic, they usually celebrate the wedding during a Mass. Sunday Mass makes one option.

If the Sunday falls during Ordinary Time of the liturgical year, one of the Scripture readings normally assigned for the day may be replaced with one from the wedding lectionary (Order of Celebrating Marriage, 34). At other times of year, the readings are always taken from the Sunday lectionary.

The couple may join the entrance procession behind the ministers and the priest. People sing the congregational parts of the Mass. The exchange of consent and nuptial blessing take place as they do in any wedding Mass.
