Hi Everyone,

As I write this I am about three and a half weeks from heading to Europe with my daughter, Laura. By the time you are reading this I will be home. We have been planning this trip most of her life as she started asking when she was seven if I would take her to Paris! She never gave up on that dream and I am fairly convinced that it is a past life connection that has driven her passion for this adventure. She has never wavered from wanting to go but she has wavered in her belief that we would. And belief is everything.

We had planned to go on this trip to Paris last year in the spring. Laura was very excited but apprehensive and doubting we would make it happen. Besides the obvious that her mother is not rich and this was going to be expensive, she also thought the Universe, God, or whatever the choice, was against her. Well, her mother had been saving and the tickets were bought. The passports arrived. She still had doubt. I had, what I thought was belief for us both. That is clearly not enough. The volcano in Iceland started acting up. It wasn't going to be a problem yet but Laura believed it would. The volcano exploded, flights were canceled, air quality was bad. I probably could have still gone but talking to people in Paris led me to realize that the air quality would not be good for Laura's asthma. I told Laura that if she had belief that we were actually going, we would. She laughed at me and said, "I am sure that the volcano erupted JUST because of me!" I answered her sarcasm with, "The volcano didn't erupt because of you but it has effected you because of your belief. You see, any given day there are tragedies, as well as miracles, happening all over the world. They effect you according to your beliefs. If you don't believe in miracles, then you won't see them. If you believe that something is going to get in your way, it will." She believed we would not be going last year. We didn't.

This year, she believes. At least she is giving it EVERYTHING she's got. Then I was thinking the other day about how badly she has always wanted this and I began to worry about her satisfaction with the trip. After so many years of excitement about it I was starting to worry that she would be disappointed because it wouldn't meet her expectations. Now there was work to be done on my end! You see...worry is a form of negative belief. And now my belief or worry could create disappointment for my daughter. My work on this worry began with me reminding myself that the only thing that could create disappointment for Laura is herself. I have no control over her experience. I only have control over my experience.

We all have complete control over our experiences. We have the power to make every experience an experience of a lifetime. And the power lies within us to create the best or the worst time of our lives within every experience. We choose every day. We don't always have the choice what happens. We don't make bad things happen because of our beliefs, but our beliefs make bad things effect us. And our beliefs make good things effect us as well. It's tricky. So, Laura worked on her beliefs and I worked on my negative beliefs (worry) and we are going on our trip. I believe it will be, an experience of a lifetime!

Namaste, Joan

PEACOCK

Peacock symbolism: Vision, Royalty, Spirituality, Awakening, Guidance, Protection, & Watchfulness.

In Greco-Roman mythology the Peacock tail has the "eyes" of the stars. In Hinduism, the Peacock is associated with Lakshmi who represents patience, kindness and luck. In Persia the Peacock is seen as a guardian to royalty, and is often seen in engravings upon their thrones. In Christianity the Peacock represents the "all-seeing" church. The Peacock also represents resurrection, renewal and immortality within the spiritual teachings of Christianity. Themes of renewal are also linked to alchemical traditions too, as many schools of thought compare the resurrecting phoenix to the modern-day Peacock.

The Peacock has been linked to Kuan Yin and it is this deity that is supposedly the creator of the beautiful colors of the Peacock's signature tail feathers. Legend tells us Kuan Yin could have been immortal but stayed because she wished to aid humanity in their spiritual evolution. Kuan Yin taught people, through her own compassionate spirit, to live together as friends. When she decided to go to the heavens she appointed a guardian to keep the earth peaceful. She called a bird, with dull brown feathers, to her. She rubbed her face and brushed her hands down the length of its feathers, which created a kaleidoscope of colors and beautiful eyes on the end of each long feather. The Peacock feathers remind us that Kuan Yin is compassionately watching over us.

It has also been said that the Peacock is the earthly manifestation of the phoenix. The feathers are talismans to protect the wearer from accidents, poisoning, diseases, and other disasters. For this reason the Peacock feather represents immortality, and can absorb negative energies, protecting those who wear them. Just like the phoenix those who wear the Peacock feather can rise from the ashes.

Peacock energy can help you on your spiritual path and breathe new life into your walk of faith. The Peacock is a symbol of the compassion of Kuan Yin and the integrity that is possible in all religions. It is the watcher of all. Remember, the cry of the Peacock is a call to Kuan Yin to help her people. The Peacock is a reminder to all of us to show our true colors.

GIFTS FROM THE OCEAN

The sound of the ocean soothes most people. Actually any movement of water seems to be a natural neutralizer of all stress and chaos within. People have had a love affair with water since life began. Why? We are basically made up of mostly water and we spend our beginnings in the womb emerged within a water of sorts. Although we don't all feel safe in water, most of us feel a sense of well-being to be near it. And the waters of the world hold many treasures that we have only begun to discover. When we hold something or wear something that was born of water we naturally feel a wholeness or connection with it. This is one of the many reasons that Pearls, Abalone, White Shell, Wampum, and much more have been highly thought of and cherished for thousands of years in many different cultures.

There are almost as many stories of these riches from the deep as there are cultures. Chinese dragons were water creatures and legend has it that pearls may have been the tears of the gods falling from the heavens when dragons fought and died. And yet other cultures have said that pearls were "dragon tears" of the dragons that were left behind when man began to kill them. Pearls then became known for relieving sadness and grief, especially from losing a loved one. And abalone shell pieces tumbled by the ocean and washed up to shore were thought to be dragon scales and small tumbled pieces are still called that today. Since dragons have long been known to be strong protectors, and magical creatures, pearls and abalone have been traditionally known to be worn for protection and magic. White shell was worn by many Native American peoples to honor and remember White Shell Woman who is important to the creation story and was the wife of water. Aboriginal tribes believed, and some still do, that spiritual power can be gained by carrying certain shells. Also the people of Hawaii believe that Mana, or a person's soul is deep within a person's bones. Since shells, as bones, protect the Mana of the creatures of the deep, this community purports that shells represent protection for the soul. Wampum, a type of shell, was used as a form of money by Native tribes as it was a symbol of richness and honor. The longer a strand of Wampum, the more it was worth. Many times Wampum was beaded together with white shell beads made from Whelk shell. White shell had a spiritual meaning and was a symbol of truth and purity. Many tribes didn't even have a word that meant lie until they learned what a lie was from the white man. More Wampum meant more stature and higher stature meant more wealth and higher wisdom.

The Pearl has long been known to be associated with the moon. It represents the ebb and flow of life and change within life. Just as the moon affects the tides so too does the Pearl affect the bearer in making beautiful change possible. It has been known to enhance personal integrity and provides a reflection of the self or reflection of the soul so that one may know themselves on a deeper spiritual level. It has long been used to increase fertility and ease childbirth. The Pearl also helps the one wearing it to connect to the Goddess and ultimate feminine energy. They are very calming and it is said that to hold a pearl will make one want to gently rock from side to side like being tumbled by gentle waves. The Pearl resonates with the solar plexus and heart chakras and can help bring harmony to relationships. Abalone shell can also make one feel a sense of security. It has gentle blue, white and green ripples of color that look like the waves of the ocean. It has also been used to increase intuition and imagination. Mother of Pearl is the white part of the Abalone shell, and Paua shell is the blue part. It is called Mother of Pearl as it is the shell or protector of the Pearl. The Mother of Pearl is often given to loved ones, especially Mothers as it represents connection to family. Young women within some Apache tribes wear Abalone for coming of age ceremony as it is the next step to becoming mothers. In China, the Pearl is worn for immortality, (dragons are immortal as they do not die natural age deaths but can be killed by man), enlightenment, and wisdom. All shells have been traditionally used for help with skeletal health, dysfunctions of the spinal column, joint disorders, calcium deficiencies, and also helps with hearing disorders.

A Pearl is made from a secretion of an oyster or mollusk that is produced to protect it from foreign objects. When a small grain of sand finds its way into an oyster or mollusk it is an irritant and the creature begins to produce nacre which is a shiny, shimmering substance that begins as a type of organic glue around the sand. This is the same beautiful substance that creates the inner shiny colors of shells. As the creature keeps coating this over and over a pearl is formed by the multitude of layers. With an irritant being the catalyst for the eventual beauty, Pearls have also been known to hold the energy of cleansing as the moon cleanses, gently dislodging "irritants" from our lives. Pearls can take between seven and eight years to develop. There are many types of Pearls including; natural-made without the help of man, cultured-made when a foreign substance is intentionally put into an oyster or mollusk, baroque-pearls with irregular shapes, blister pearls-pearls that grow attached to the shell of the creature, and freshwater-pearls which form in fresh water and resemble puffy rice.

Finally, it is important to mention that whatever one is drawn to is what one may need. Many people come into the shop looking for "birthstones". There is nothing wrong with this and tradition is nice sometimes. But keep in mind that birthstones were "picked" out by the American National Association of Jewelers in 1912 and they really had no basis for their "picks". They were just that, picks. And traditionally Pearls have been given on the 1st, 3rd, 12th, and 30th anniversaries. Again, tradition is nice but there is no substitution for choosing what your intuition says you or a loved one need. Listen to your intuition, it will never lead you wrong. Get something for yourself today that leads you back to your beginnings.

We welcome all drummers and all experience levels! It's not a wide open drum jam - I facilitate lightly, suggesting rhythms and teaching whatever needs to be taught. But, the core of our drumming is that we allow the spirit of the drum to "play through us." The drumming lasts for about 90 minutes. We take a short break, then the second part of the evening is more directly ceremonial, meditative, or shamanic - whichever word you wish to use. We include the break between the two parts so that those who want the drumming but not the ceremony may exit. Jaime's events often sell out and he has written a book called "Drumming the Soul Awake". He is also available for individual shamanic journeying, journeying for them, or doing a divination on an issue they are working on, (please call for more information) If you would like to know even more, please visit his website at www.drummingthesoulawake.com.

MBS PICKS

People ask all the time what books we recommend. We decided that just the two of us limit the books that one would consider a "good" read. So to expand the pool of books recommended, we are introducing you to a series of practitioner, employee, and perhaps some customer picks! We will have these picks on hand or will order them for you in a timely fashion. Next in our series are LuAnn Borders's Picks! LuAnn works at the shop when she isn't doing her "real" job. She is an avid reader and has read a great deal of books in this arena. These two books are LuAnn's favorite recommendations at this time. Enjoy!

A Charmed Life; Celebrating Wicca Every Day by Patricia J. Telesco

Everything an eclectic, green, hedgewich could wish to connect with. This book has everything from the solo activities that an eclectic would enjoy to the herbal that a hedgewich would enjoy to things that include family and friends. This is a book that celebrates every day activities in every day life.

The Way of the Green Witch by Arin Murphy-Hiscock

As the cover says: Rituals, Spells, and Practices to Bring You Back to Nature. Here comes spring and summer. What a great time to read this book as it deals specifically with nature's bounty and how we can access and use the bounty of Mother Earth in our day to day practice. Shrines, alters, sacred space, herbs, crystals, kitchen alchemy, so much information in 276 pages. Arin Murphy-Hiscock is a Canadian Author and that is one of the reasons I picked up this book. I have since read her other books as well.

Arin is a practicing Wiccan and a member of the Black Forest Clan.

The background is a bright blue sky with a sunburst effect in the upper left corner. Below the sky is a blurred green field of grass.

"If you do not change direction, you may end up where you are heading."

Understanding unity helps to solve humanity's biggest challenges.

There is no such thing as an isolated problem.

By injuring any part of the world's system, you injure yourself.

There is no such thing as a win/lose situation.

Think of life on this planet in terms of systems and not detached elements.

Broaden your field of vision and assimilate the knowledge you have.

See that the environment does not belong to any single country to exploit and then disregard.

You cannot afford to think of your relationship with the earth as a one-night stand.

There's no such thing as a free glass of milk. It's time to buy the cow.
