In 2017, a homeless man named Elmer Alvarez found a $10,000 check on the street meant for a successful real estate broker, Roberta Hoskie. Although Alvarez was broke, he still found a way to track down Hoskie to return her lost check. So touched by his honesty, Hoskie rewarded the honest man with a place to live and arranged for a job interview with one of her business partners. A year later, he was on the board of directors for Hoskie's Outreach Foundation, which helps provide affordable housing for low-to-moderate-income families.
