Nikola Tesla Describing a Cell Phone in 1926

"When wireless is perfectly applied the whole earth will be converted into a huge brain, which in fact it is, all things being particles of a real and rhythmic whole. We shall be able to communicate with one another instantly, irrespective of distance. Not only this, but through television and telephony we shall see and hear one another as perfectly as though we were face to face, despite intervening distances of thousands of miles, and the instruments through which we shall be able to do all of this, will fit in our vest pockets."

Nikola Tesla, 1926

The people who hid Anne Frank were breaking the law.
The people who killed her were following it.

A bit over two centuries ago, June 16, 1816, Mary Shelley on the left invented Science Fiction when she wrote "Frankenstein".

About 150 years later Lucille Ball on the right championed a script nobody wanted, paid for the pilot and fought the money people back enough for "Star Trek" to get made. (She also had a hand in "Westinghouse Desilu Playhouse" which gave Rod Serling the big break he needed to get "The Twilight Zone" produced.)

The mother of science fiction, and the godmother of modern science fiction, we salute you.

Little Johnny walked to the front of the classroom and dumped a box full of cash on the teacher's desk. "$2,467", he said. "$2,467!" cried the teacher, "What in the world were you selling?" "Toothbrushes", said Little Johnny. "Toothbrushes", echoed the teacher, "How could you possibly sell enough tooth brushes to make that much money?"

"I found the busiest corner in town," said Little Johnny, "I set up a Dip & Chip stand and I gave everybody who walked by a free sample." They all said the same thing, "Hey, this tastes like dog sh_t!" Then I would say, "It is dog sh_t. Wanna buy a toothbrush? I used the President Biden method of giving you some crap, dressing it up so it looks good, telling you it's free and then making you pay to get the bad taste out of your mouth."

Little Johnny got five stars for his assignment. Bless his heart.
